

”Another Dreamer”

by John Welton

© 2006

I've been telling myself for a long time now I'm gonna make a difference in the world with my songs somehow
I'm Another Dreamer
I've imagined all the people singing along with the purest of intentions, how could it go wrong?

But it's easy to lose sight of your dreams when they're spiraling in and out of focus Easier still to lose sight of your will
To continue when you feel like it's looking hopeless
I'm questioning my destiny, this world's gettin' the best of me
And I'm spreading what's left of me a little thin

Still I'll keep holding on to this pipe dream I'll keep on believing that my goals aren't as far out of reach as they seem
I think I understand now it's not the singer it's the song
With the purest of intentions how could it go wrong?

Still I'll keep telling myself for the rest of my days that my path will be revealed to me in this musical maze
I think I understand now it's not the singer it's the song
With the purest of intentions how could it go wrong?

I'm Another Dreamer
I've imagined all the people singing along